CON NOTES

May 2017

Last month, we let you know about two issues that dealt with adequate and accurate reporting. If you missed that installment of CON Notes, we encourage you to take a look. In this installment of CON Notes, Program staff wish to draw your attention to two items of high importance to the regulated community; upgrading a medical facility and reporting zeros ("0's").

Upgrading a Medical Facility

As you know, Reg. 61-15, Section 105(5)(b) states that Certificate of Need review is not applicable to the upgrading of a medical facility which does not involve additional square feet to the facility or additional health services. In most cases, these upgrades occur within the footprint of an existing facility. However, these upgrades may also occur in a new location. For instance, an ambulatory surgery facility which relocates within its defined service area, does not increase in square feet, and does not provide additional health services (operating rooms) will not undergo Certificate of Need review for such an upgrade. As older facilities continue to deteriorate and owners see a marked increase in maintenance costs, a relocation under this upgrade provision may be an option. It is worth noting, however, that the square footage threshold discussed in this regulatory section is an absolute threshold; to exceed it would trigger full Certificate of Need review. We encourage you to meet with representatives of the CON Program to understand the limits of this non-applicability as well as any licensing or certification implications which may exist for your project.

Reporting Zeros ("0's")

To carry forward from last month's CON Notes, staff wish to remind Joint Annual Report filers that leaving a field blank and reporting utilization at a rate of zero (0) are two separate and distinct actions. Program staff would ask all filers to carefully validate their inputs to ensure that, when appropriate, a volume of zero is recorded numerically. This allows staff to be certain that all inventories and need calculations are correct. It is entirely acceptable that utilization figures for a particular service or bed type may be zero for a period of time. We understand this may occur on occasion, and we appreciate your diligence in being as thorough as possible in your Joint Annual Report filings.
